A day in the côtes & terres d'arômes 2007 volnay

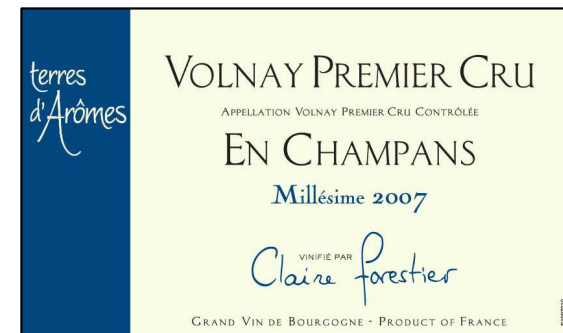

Posted at around evening time, February 7, 2009

[...] Yesterday's visits Roumier and de Vogüé made up for that though, as did my first meeting with Claire Forestier since early 2006. It seems Claire is working very hard on her new project 'Terres d'Arômes' - more of which in the Spring Burgundy Report. In the meantime here's one from her inaugural 2007 vintage - it's only been in bottle for a couple of weeks, but is apparently none-the-worse for it. [...]

2007 Terres d'Arômes, Volnay 1er En Champans

The colour is medium, medium-plus cherry red with a faint purple rim. When first opened, there's deep scent of faintly musky dark fruit, slowly the muskiness fades and the dark cherry moves to the fore, even accented by creaminess. More and more the nose fills and rounds out with higher tones - despite the dark fruit profile it's a very elegant and lovely nose. In the mouth there's very fine tannin that adds a little texture, fresh acidity and fruit that really imposes itself only from the mid-palate - but it widens nicely and has good depth.

Rebuy – Yes
